NEW BOOKS

Recently Added To The Mt.
Vernon Public Library

(By the Librarian.)

Among the new books at the public library is a twenty-two volume set of Victor Marie Hugo's better known romances, plays, and poems.

Hugo was born at Besancon, France, in 1802, and died at Paris in 1885. His father was a distinguished soldier in Napoleon's service but in spite of this the son grew up a Royalist and a Catholic and his early writings were devoted to the proclamation of these principles.

By 1816 he had written the tragedy "Irtamene" and this, with some of his early poems made him famous before his real work had begun. His first great dramatic poem was "Cromwell," and following this came a series of poems which gave him a place as one of the great elegiac and lyric poets of the world.

In 1828 the tragedy "Marion de Lorme" was proscribed on the ground that royalty could not endure that even in a play the king should be made a puppet of a minister. The appearance of "Hernani" two years later established his fame as the greatest tragic and dramatic poet since the time of Shakespeare. "Lucresia Borgia," "Mary Tudor," "Angelo, Tyrant of Padua," "Esmeralda," and "Ruy Blas" were produced in rapid succession, but on the failure of "The Burgues" he refused to submit the rest of his plays to the verdict of a public audience.

Hugo's first romance, "Bug-Jargal," was written when he was but sixteen years of age and describes the revolt of the Blacks at San Domingo in 1791. "Hans of Iceland," published two years later, was successful but very much inferior to his later work. "Last Day of a Condemned," his first mature work in fiction, was a fervent protest against capital punishment, as was also "Claude Gueux." "Notre Dame de Paris," called the greatest of all tragic poems in the form of prose narrative, was published in 1831. From this story he took the famous play "Esmeralda." Many volumes followed this, any one of which would have established his name forever in the world of literature. In 1862 "Les Miserables," the greatest work of fiction ever created, was published. It portrays a soul, degraded by abuse and toil in the galleys, finally redeemed and glorified through suffering.

The other volumes of this set which have not been mentioned are "The Man Who Laughs," "Napoleon, the Little," "Ninety-three," "Tollers of the Sea," and "The History of a Crime," all of which you should have read. If you have not done so, now is your opportunity for these are on the shelves and ready for your use at the library.

THROWN

Into Culvert When Automobile Overturned

Condit People Have A Very Narrow Escape

On Pike Between Mt. Liberty
And Centerburg

Centerburg, Sept. 16—A culvert probably saved the lives yesterday evening at six o'clock of a party of Condit people returning from Mt. Vernon, when their automobile overturned completely three miles north-east of here on the pike. Those in the party were: Mr. and Mrs. George Mills, Dr. and Mrs. Mills, Charles Green and Anna Green, all of Condit and Charles Deeds of Granville, the latter the owner and driver of the car.

When the machine upset, the entire party was thrown into the culvert over which the inverted machine lay. Had it not been for this fortunate spot, the party would have been pinned under the car and danger of fatality would have been great.

As it was, all were quite badly bruised. Mrs. Mills, wife of Dr. Mills, was severely cut about the face and body from the glass in the windshield. Charles Green had several of his ribs fractured. These were the more serious of the injuries.

Dr. Merriman and Dr. Gantt of this village took charge of the party and rendered surgical attention. I. S. Greek drove out to the scene of the accident, brought the injured people here and later took charge of the car. This was damaged to the extent of $25.

The party was returning home to Condit from Mt. Vernon, where all attended the circus. After leaving Mt. Liberty, Charles Deeds, who was driving, noticed a small machine in front of him which turned out at the sound of his klaxon. He started to pass the auto and had almost reached it when it swerved in front of him. He hastily steered his car to the side to avoid the crash, but in so doing ran into a large and long pile of crushed stone which is used to repair the pike. His car skidded a distance of 125 feet, struck the culvert and overturned.

The top of the auto was mashed, the windshield broken, while the steering wheel was smashed. The accident occurred near the farm of Charles Mortley at a place known as Mortley's Crossing.

WASHINGTON

Soon To Entertain The Grand Army

Washington, Sept. 16—With Nelson Miles, former commanding general of the United States army, at their head, a grand parade of the Grand Army of the Republic will traverse the course of that previous grand parade which marked the end of the Civil war. The coming duplicate of the memorable parade of 1865 will take place on Wednesday, Sept. 29, and it will mark the great day of the national encampment of the veterans.

For once Washingtonians are genuinely interested in something that is coming to Washington. The 49th annual encampment of the G. A. R., which will take place here from Sept. 27 to Oct. 3, inclusive, is awaited with the most pleasant anticipation, and the old soldiers and their friends will be given a welcome that will melt their hearts. From the start the affair will be dramatic and picturesque. An attendance to equal the Gettysburg gathering of two years ago is looked for. From all of the 46 different departments, delegations of various sizes are expected to attend, for the half century anniversary of the closing of the great struggle draws the veterans' attention as never before. There are now approximately 6,000 posts in the U. S. There will be between 1,500 and 1,600 accredited delegates. The remaining thousands will be the guests of the encampment.

According to present information, the Grand Army will not attempt a discussion of national defense, but will be content to adopt a resolution endorsing the policies of the administration. However, on Oct. 4, the day after the reunion ends, a great conference on national defense will begin a three-day session in Washington, and many of the veterans will remain over.

It is expected that the question of still further extending the pension roll will be discussed thoroughly at the encampment. It is believed that the government will be asked to amend the act of June 27, 1890, so as to create a new class of eligibles. Under the present law, widows who married soldiers after the date of the act are ineligible for pensions. The amendment favored by the G. A. R. provides that such widows who married subsequently to June 27, 1890, and lived with their husbands several years, shall be entitled to pension. Some veterans favor a 3-year period, others five, to meet the criticism that designing women have married decrepit soldiers for the purpose of securing government money after the death of their husbands.

The reproduction of the grand review which passed before President Lincoln in 1865 is the center of interest here. President Wilson will review the veterans, and as nearly as possible the veterans will be given the same positions in the line that they occupied a half century ago. For instance, Commander-in-Chief David J. Lincoln, will again be first in line. Col. Palmer led the march of Sherman's army up Pennsylvania avenue fifty years ago; today, as commander-in-chief, he is slated to again lead the way. Assisting Gen. Miles as marshals will be Lieut. Generals S. B. M. Young and John C. Bates. The route of the parade this year will be only about a mile and a quarter long, so that the strength of the veterans will not be taxed.

RAILROAD VETERANS HONOR JAMES J. HILL

Grand Forks, N. D., Sept. 16—Six hundred veterans of the Great Northern Railway gathered here today to honor James J. Hill, the famous railroad builder of the northwest. From all along the line of the big Hill railroad have come the veterans who saw twenty-five years of service under Mr. Hill. This is the 77th birthday anniversary of President Hill, and the Veterans' Association of the Great Northern meets on his birthday each year.

One of the important questions to be considered at the Grand Forks birthday party is a pension fund, for the nucleus of which Mr. Hill has donated a considerable sum. It is proposed to augment this by assessing each member of the association one per cent of his annual earnings, no member to be taxed more than $3 per month nor less than 50 cents per month. From this fund the members of the association will be pensioned as they leave the service of the Great Northern because of disability or old age.

The veterans will hold meetings today and tomorrow, and the big annual banquet will be held tonight.

More Suits

THIS WEEK'S ARRIVALS have again completed our range of sizes, colors and models for early buyers. Fur trim continues the big seller; but those that are shown with braid trimmings are so snappy and effective in appearance that many prefer the latter effect.

Velour, Chiffon Broadcloth, Gabardine, Serge and Poplin together with beautiful mixtures make a most satisfactory variety from which to choose. Navys and greens seem most popular; but all the other wanted colors are well represented.

CHILD FATALLY SHOT

Then Rice found the victim was his daughter.

COMMUNICATION

THE Y. M. C. A.

Editor The Banner:

It has been rather noticeable of late that all is hustle and bustle around the Y. M. C. A. building, which naturally leads one to believe this is but a forerunner of what is to come when the whirlwind campaign for two hundred members in five days begins the first of the coming week. This is a fine undertaking and should receive the support of every honest man in the city.

I have known personally where entire families have been benefited by the male members becoming affiliated with this institution, and one in particular of which I wish to speak.

A number of years ago, among a family of several children there was one, a boy between the age of 12 and 14 years, who received the idea that he would like to become a member of this association. Approaching his father on the subject, he found dad's sympathies did not run in this direction, so the proposition was turned down cold. Being a courageous little chap, he persevered in his desire and ere long, through the influence of others, he was permitted to join, with the privilege of working out his membership as many others have done and are now doing.

He became enthusiastic over the work in the gymnasium and would often bring home glowing reports of his accomplishments along this line. Father became interested and finally, at the earnest solicitation of a number of friends, he too became a member. In taking this step the man builded far better than he knew, for as the years rolled by it served to lead him onward and upward into pathways that are pleasant to tread.

Often in the fall and winter months, feeling in need of a little recreation after a day's work in the factory, father and son would go to the Y. together. Entering the building, each would go to his separate department, enjoy a couple hours of good clean sport in congenial company and return home, and deep down in the heart of each there would nestle a feeling of perfect content, with the satisfied knowledge of an evening well spent and profitable.

This is but one case among many which serves to prove the boy is often father to the man and while no names are mentioned, a wise man can, by reading between the lines, often see much that does not appear on the surface. Today dad and the boy are good pals, faithful members and last but not least, loyal boosters for the coming campaign.

I have often heard it said the Y. M. C. A. caters only to boys of the upper class, that is, boys coming from well-to-do families. This I know is untrue, as a glance over the books will show that a large majority of the boys work out their membership just as this other one has done.

If there is a boy in the city who desires to become a member, with the idea of building up his body and mind, but hesitates to do so because of lack of funds, I would advise him to hunt up our genial general secretary, Mr. R. H. Kinney, state the facts to him truthfully and I will positively guarantee Mr. Kinney will devise ways and means whereby his wish may be gratified.

In closing I will state that if any one should wish to confer with the writer on the above mentioned subject, he will find my time and service at his command.
